justifiable. Mr. Morris says it is as fine clay for road surfacing as he has ever seen. He authorizes us to state that the top paving dressing can be poured whenever the temperature is at 50 degrees or above and that the work will be pushed at all possible speed. All of which is good news, as some of us had gotten the impression that the paving material could not be poured satisfactorily at a temperature below 72 degrees. The announcement that additional paving projects of three and a fraction miles on both the Elba and Troy ends of the present Elba-Troy highway projects have been allotted is also good news to all of us.

TRUE TO FORM—Lamar Rainer is running true to form. No matter whether it be Spring, Summer, Fall or Winter, the Rainer garden is always one of the beauty spots of the community. This Winter is no exception to the rule. Lamar has an abundance of everything that can be grown in this clime at this season of the year, and his garden is a "treat for sore eyes." He is also parboiling proud of the fine flock of Barrington pullets which are just coming into laying. Their eggs are unusually large and uniform for pullets.

JOINS NAVY—John Will Reddoch has received word that he has been accepted in the Navy of the U. S. Navy. He will go to Birmingham Sunday in order to be there to stand the final physical examination early Monday morning. As he is one of the finest specimens of physical manhood to be found in this section, or anywhere else, for that matter, there is little doubt of his passing. John Will starred on Elba High School football teams for a number of time record as a boxer hereabouts and while in one of the CCC camps. He is a favorite of baseball fans, fiabits and his pleasing personality has made him popular with a large circle of friends. His brother, Eldred, has been in the Navy for more than three years and has made a good record. John Will intends to go in for boxing, for which he has great adaptability. Under the training and instruction available in the Navy, he should make his mark in the flatie world. I would not be surprised to hear some day of "John Will Reddoch, middle weight champion of the Navy." He will be stationed at Norfolk, Va.

NOT PERFECT—Terry Reidrick owns up to the fact that he makes mistakes once in a great while. He evidently was in one of his rare error-making moods last week when he handed me the figures on the car tags that have been issued in Coffee County. The genial deputy probate judge had his sights too low and undershot the mark considerably. GOING STRONG — Haldane Strain, of Birmingham, was in town Tuesday after spending the Thanksgiving holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Haldane Strain. "Daney" is kept very busy playing in two orchestras and conducting a class in violin at Howard College, but finds in his pleasing personality has made him popular with a large circle of friends. Our attention was first called to the soil surveys made of some of the counties in Alabama by Howard C. Smith, at the time editor of the Union Springs Herald, and we recall vividly his showing us a large map of Bullock County which he had helped to prepare. Bullock perhaps has a great or greater diversity of soils than any other county in Alabama, some 32, and hence has a great variety of crops.

One of the things science has done for the once despised and cast away cotton seed is crush them in a roller mill and then sift and press the meal under 3,000 to 4,000 pounds per square inch, thereby securing crude cottonseed oil. The oil is washed with caustic soda solution and then bleached with fuller's earth (which we now bring mined in Barbour County, Alabama), and then thru other processes come cottonseed stearin, used in oleomargarine, while the purified oil is used as a salad oil.

We recently had occasion to look over some old letters which were posted before the days of envelopes when it was quite an art to fold a letter and say "You don't have to prepay a letter. The price of postage depended on how far it was to go. A penny was the average amount, but sometimes it took a quarter. We are glad that the law now requires the sender to prepay the postage, for it would put us in a bad humor to have to pay 3 cents postage on a dun.

We heard a friend telling how he had to give up some luxuries To put your finger on a luxury isn't so easy. A thing may be a necessity to one, yet to another a luxury. "A shirt for the body and a chimney in the house," says Lazarus, "were a great luxury in the Middle Ages; today they are necessities even for the poorest." Some skinflint was lamenting the fact that so many chimneys had been built in England, and so many families had earthen dishes to replace wooden ones.

Oysters have a high iodine content and are good sources of minerals, such as iron, copper and manganese, which, according to leading investigators, render oysters of value in the prevention and treatment of nutritional anemia; however, this is not the reason why we like to eat 'em. It's because we just naturally like 'em raw, fried, roasted, scalloped, or in a stew.

CORN WEEVILS ARE PLENTIFUL IN STATE

AUBURN, Ala.—Indications are that corn-weevil damage this winter in Alabama will exceed the three to four million dollars loss of normal years.

Because of the larger crop of corn, higher prices and greater abundance of weevils, due, perhaps, to warm winters in recent years, Prof. J. M. Robinson, entomologist at Auburn, anticipates increased damage. Fall reports, he says, indicate that this well-known insect is abundant throughout the Southern half of Alabama and less numerous in the Northern half.

The corn weevil is ranked second only to boll weevils in damage done to Alabama crops by insects. Yet it can be controlled effectively and inexpensively, Professor Robinson said. This can be done through fumigation with carbon disulphide in accordance with standard directions sent from Auburn or distributed by county agents who are conducting demonstrations in fumigation. Complete but concise information is contained in Leaflet No. 8, "Control of Insect Pests in Stored Grains, Peas and Beans," published by the Alabama Experiment Station.

WAR ON RATS

It is conservatively estimated that every rat in the country costs $2 a year in food consumed and other damage done on farms and elsewhere. Realization of this fact has led to widespread efforts to exterminate these pests through organized community efforts.

Through the use of calcium cyanide gas the citizens of one county in Ohio destroyed about 50,000 rats in a month. A vocational agriculture class in Illinois made rat killing a game, choosing sides in a contest to see which side could accumulate the largest number of rat tails.

In many other communities farmers, boys' and girls' clubs, and citizens generally have waged war on the destructive rodents with excellent results.

The rat is one of the greatest enemies of mankind, being a carrier of disease, as well as a destroyer of property. Every possible means should be systematically employed for the extirpation of this pest.

CORN-HOG GROWERS OFFERED CONTRACTS

Benefit payments will be offered to Alabama farmers who wish to adjust their corn or hog production in 1935. The maximum reduction to be required by the 1935 contracts will be 10 per cent under the base average for 1932 and 1933. However, corn growers may reduce as much as 30 per cent and get benefit payments in proportion with their reduction.

BANKHEAD ACT VOTE IS SET FOR DECEMBER 15

Southern cotton growers will vote on the Bankhead Act on December 14, announces Secretary Wallace. If two-thirds of the producers voting favor it, it will be continued in 1935 on an improved and more flexible basis. Otherwise it will be discarded.

The question to be answered by the cotton growers will be "Are you in favor of continuing the Bankhead Act for next year?" The ballot for voting are from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Eligible voters are "persons who have by the legal subdivision, such as owner, tenant, share-cropper or otherwise, produced cotton on any cotton farm, or part thereof, in the United States for the crop year 1935-36."

If LINCOLN HAD OWNED A LAMP like this

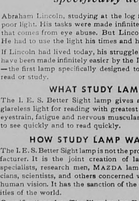
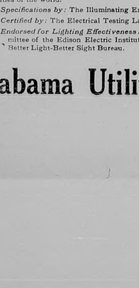
New I. E. S. Better Sight is first study lamp specifically designed to safeguard eyesight

Abraham Lincoln, studying at the log fire, was handicapped by poor light. His tasks were made infinitely harder by the fatigue that comes from eye strain. As Lincoln had no choice. He had to use the light his times and his means provided.

If Lincoln had lived today, his struggle for advancement would have been made infinitely easier by the I. E. S. Better Sight lamp —the first lamp specifically designed to safeguard eyes as they read or study.





WHAT STUDY LAMP DOES

The I. E. S. Better Sight lamp gives a soft, well diffused and glareless light for reading with greatest eye comfort. It reduces eyestrain, nervous and muscular tension. It makes it easy to see quickly and to read quickly.

HOW STUDY LAMP WAS CREATED

The I. E. S. Better Sight lamp is not the product of any single manufacturer. It is the joint creation of lamp designers, eyesight specialists, research men, MAZDA lamp engineers, physicians, scientists, and others concerned with the conservation of human vision. It has the sanction of the leading lighting authorities of the world.

Specifications by: The Illuminating Engineering Society.

Certified by: The Electrical Testing Laboratories.

Endorsed for Lighting Effectiveness by: The Lighting Committee of the Edison Electric Institute, and by the National Better Light-Better Sight Bureau.

THE NEW STUDY LAMP

The I. E. S. Better Sight lamp is 28 inches high—the height prescribed by science for delivering the proper light on table or desk. Equipped with a white glass diffuser—which throws the light downward and upward. Shade is lined with pure white pigment. It uses 100-watt MAZDA lamps, or a 100-watt MAZDA Daylight lamp.

"Plain Bill" Brandon, Alabama's Former Governor, Dies In Tuscaloosa Hospital

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Dec. 7.—William Woodward Brandon, former governor and one of the outstanding political figures of Alabama, died at 4.45 a.m. today in a hospital to which he was taken Saturday for a rest. He was 66 years old. Death was due to cerebral hemorrhage.

In failing health since in 1928 when he took the stump in behalf of Alfred E. Smith, the president on the Democratic ticket in one of the bitterest political campaigns in the State's history, he had for the most part lived a quiet life at his home here.

The former Governor, however, returned to the national spotlight in the Democratic National Convention in Chicago in 1932, as chairman of the Alabama delegation. It was he who announced "Alabama yields to Massachusetts" to permit the nomination of President Roosevelt to be by first placed votes.

It was "Plain Bill" Brandon as chairman of the Alabama delegation who cast the first vote for the nomination of President Roosevelt in that historic convention.

"Alabama casts 24 votes for Roosevelt," he intoned into a hot-hurt microphone, as he and his colleagues brought on by the 1928 campaign was apparent. The man in heart was the same, but the voice lacked the sonorous tones and fire of the 1928 convention.

In the hearts of citizens of Alabama, where he was universally loved, he remained the same "Plain Bill" he had always been.

On the capitol lawn at Montgomery today the flag was lowered to half staff, and in the corridors of the historic capitol building where for four years he held the highest office within the gift of his fellow-citizences, there was mourning—for the former Governor Brandon but for "Bill" Brandon, a friend.

It was thus that men, high and low, over the State spoke of him today, and remembered him.

Former Governor Brandon was born at Talladega, Ala., June 5, 1868, the son of the Rev. Franklin Thomas and Carolyn Woodward Brandon. He received his early education at Cedar Bluff and Talladega, after which he attended the University of Alabama.

Bill Brandon made two races for Governor of Alabama and in his second attempt, was overwhelmingly elected. He was defeated for the office in 1918, but came back in 1922 to score a decisive victory. He was both a good winner and a good loser in politics, though he seldom lost.

He studied law at the University of Alabama and drove a streetcar while he was doing it. He served two terms in the lower House of the Alabama Legislature and as reading clerk of the constitutional convention in 1901.

He was a member of a number of secret orders and reached high station in several of them. He was a Mason, a Knight of Pythias, a Red Man, an Elk, and others.

The Clipper has been asked to announce that next Tuesday, December 18th, has been designated as "Clean-Up Day" for Evergreen Cemetery at Elba. All who are interested in this cemetery are urged to come on that day prepared to do a good day's work or to send some one to do a day's work.

Elba people and people of this community have always looked after this burial ground in a splendid manner, but for the past few months a good portion of it has been neglected and presents a very unsightly appearance. This work is very badly needed at this time and every one is urged to lend a hand on next Tuesday.

GENERAL STANLEY, VETERAN ALABAMA EDITOR, SUCCUMBS

GREENVILLE, Ala., Dec. 10.—General James Berney Stanley, 91, publisher of The Greenville Advocate and the last Confederate veteran actively connected with an Alabama newspaper, died here yesterday. He founded The Advocate in 1865. He was a former vice-president of the National Press Association and a former State Senator.

The pen now stilled by death had chronicled events in Alabama and had written editorial comment that had formed a vital part in molding public opinion in Greenville and all Alabama.

His positive stand on questions of vital public interest at the time soon won for him the confidence of his fellow citizens and a place among the virile editors of those stirring days of Reconstruction. Always his pen was ready to seek help for and to lavish praise on his comrades in arms in the War Between the States.

At his death, General Stanley was the oldest editor in point of service in the United States, having continued in active charge of his paper until illness this fall forced him to retire.

The title of general was conferred on General Stanley by the State during the administration of the late Governor W. C. Oates, in recognition of his many years of service in the interests of the public.

General Stanley, whose health had been failing gradually for the last two or three years, was believed to be near the end when the end was approaching. He died at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, when he passed away at his family, including six children and an only sister, were all at his bedside.

The veteran editor was born near Hayneville in Lowndes County, the son of Robert Stanley and Emma (Stone) Stanley, in 1843. Entering the War Between the States with three other brothers, General Stanley was badly wounded at the battle of Franklin. A brother, William Stanley, was killed.

Before that time the war in 1865, General Stanley founded The Greenville Advocate, and often had to be sold from it to subscriptions to Federal officers commanding troops garrisoned in the town.

In his latter years his sons took over the active management of the paper. General Stanley held an active public career. He was a member of the Greenville school board and a city councilman at one time. He served as vice-president of the National Press Association and as president of the Alabama Press Association. He has been a delegate to many National Conventions. He took an active interest in the old soldiers' home in Mountain Creek and has served on that board. He served in the State Senate from his district in the 1927 legislature.

He was a member of several secret orders and of the Methodist Church.

Surviving are one sister, Mrs. C. H. Beard, Savannah, Ga., three daughters, Miss Irene Stanley and Mrs. W. E. Smith, Greenville, and Mrs. H. B. Parker, Dallas, Texas, and three sons, Dr. R. H. Stanley, Foley, and P. W. and J. G. Stanley, of Greenville.

GOOD PROGRAM AT ELBA THEATRE COMING WEEK

The Elba Theatre has booked for the coming week several of the best pictures to be obtained.

Tonite—Last time—the management is showing "Men In White" for the last time. The starring team in this great picture is Clark Gable and Myrna Loy, together with Jean Hersholt, Elizabeth Allan, Otto Kruger and many others.

Friday and Saturday, in addition to the regular installment of "The Flying Squadron," with Bob Steele, and a good comedy, "Fighting To Live," an excellent Westcorn, will be shown.

Sunday and Monday—Probably the best mated pair of stars in Hollywood, Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, are together again in "Change of Heart." James Dunn and Ginger Rogers furnish the comedy for this picture, which promises to be the best entertainment of its kind here in a good while.

Next Tuesday's attraction is "Here Comes the Groom," starring Jack Haley, Patricia Ellis, Ted Hamilton and Isabel Jewell. This picture is packed with thrills and good, clean comedy.

"Tarzan and His Mate," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's spectacle of the screen, showing the many escapades and narrow escapes of Tarzan in the jungle wilds, is booked to be shown here next Wednesday and Thursday. Johnny Weismuller plays the part of Tarzan to perfection, and Maureen O'Sullivan is his "mate."

Ladies especially invited to visit our counter for Oysters on Half-Shell. Fresh shipments received daily. Harvey's Market, Phone 6.

Rev. and Mrs. L. W. Tubb and son spent Friday night in Elba with relatives, en route to their home in Columbia from Brent, where they visited Rev. Tubb's mother and other relatives.

W. B. PERDUE, PIONEER CITIZEN, DIES AFTER SHORT ILLNESS IN A MONTGOMERY HOSPITAL

Mr. W. Boland Perdue, age 76, prominent Elbian and one of the city's most highly esteemed citizens, died at a Montgomery hospital last Saturday morning following a short illness. The news of his death was a shock to people of the town, as only a few knew of his illness.

Mr. Perdue had not been in good health for a number of years but his last illness was of short duration. He was confined to bed Friday all day and late in the afternoon, after he had failed to respond to medical treatment, it was deemed best to carry him to a hospital. At the hospital little hope for his recovery was held out and an operation was decided upon. He died on the operating table, and it was found that he had an intestinal obstruction.

Mr. Perdue spent the early part of his life in Lowndes and Crenshaw Counties, and moved to Elba thirty-two years ago from Luverne. He was a contractor and engaged in this profession for many years before coming to Elba. He erected the City School building, the Methodist Church and many of the other brick buildings in the business part of the city. He manufactured brick at the brick manufacturing plant here and operated it for a long time. Through his plant brick was furnished for practically all the early buildings here and his products were distributed throughout the entire section. On account of ill health during recent years he had not been engaged in any active business enterprises.

Soon after removing to Elba Mr. Perdue joined the Methodist Church and had been one of its most loyal and devotet members. He served continuously on the Board of Stewards and was also one of the trustees of church property. He was a consecrated Christian and his life of devotion and service is worthy of emulation. He was one of the most faithful attendants at the church services and will be greatly missed by the entire membership. It can be truly said that a great and good man has passed away.

Surviving are his wife, Sallie N. Perdue; four sons, D. P. Perdue of Elba; Dr. G. N. Perdue of Fort Valley, Ga.; Marvin L. Perdue of Birmingham, and Albert Perdue, who now lives in Chicago, Chile S. A. He also leaves one sister, Mrs. W. E. Gafford of Fort Deposit, and a number of other relatives.

Funeral services were held in the Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon at two o'clock, with Rev. G. Smith, pastor, officiating, assisted by Minister Jas. C. Boone. Following the church services the body was laid to rest in Evergreen Cemetery. Active pallbearers were T. H. Deal, C. B. McDowell, Luther Nathan, J. W. Kendrick, Jr., Ben Marley and R. C. Bryan. Elba Funeral Home had charge of arrangements.

Among the out-of-town relatives attending the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Gafford and Mr. and Mrs. Claud Harrison of Fort Deposit; Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Naftel and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pugsley, of Naftel; Boland and Albert Naftel and Miss Helen Claire Naftel of Montgomery.

About People and Things

By C. B. McDowell

PATRIARCH PASSES—In the death of Mr. W. B. Perdue, which occurred Saturday morning in a Montgomery hospital, I feel that I have lost one of my dearest friends. I have had the pleasure of sitting next to him for the past five or six years in the bass corner of the Methodist Church choir and as superintendent of the Methodist Sunday School, I had learned to depend upon Mr. Perdue as one of my most faithful standbys. Almost without exception, Mr. and Mrs. Perdue were among the first arrivals at Sunday School. To say that his presence will be sadly missed is stating it entirely inadequately. For years Mr. Perdue has occupied choir loft on the east front pew. His station had learned to glance at his familiar figure for time to time for inspiration. Pastor Smith aptly expressed his sentiment when he stated that a vacancy has been created in his congregation that it will take a long time to fill. During the years I have known Mr. Perdue I have never heard a single word other than praiseworthy of his record as a citizen, neighbor and Christian gentleman. What a satisfaction it must be to a pastor to preach the funeral of such a saint as was Mr. Perdue.

PEP MEETING — The powers that be of the Emergency Aid Life Association held a pep meeting at Lily Valley last Thursday night in the form of a fish fry, testimony meeting, etc. Tobe Rhodes, who has charge of agents who are selling policies for Elba's new insurance company, in his "pep" talks to the solicitors, likened his Associates to "Woco-Pep." He told a story about two policeas that went out in the road to discuss the general situation, when a "Woco-Pep" gas truck came along. One policeat said to the other, "Whew! We've got to get us some of that stuff if we expect to stay in business." Tobe said the old line life insurance companies are finding themselves in the same predicament as the policeats.

MIGHTY HUNTER—Elba boasts of having some of the most successful bird hunters to be found anywhere. But I believe it remained for Deputy Probate Judge Terry Kendrick to bang up a record that all of the local nimrods may shoot at for many a day. Terry says he went dove shooting on Thanksgiving Day, accompanied by his young son, "Hot Shot." Terry says he shot 42 times without getting "any feather," but finally an unsuspecting dove lit on a corn stalk. Taking careful aim, he blazed away and the bird dropped to earth, slightly wounded. "

NEGROES OWNED SLAVES

Few of the present generation, particularly in the North, know that before the Civil War a great many free negroes in the South owned other negroes as slaves. Some interesting facts concerning the subject are given in Prof. Carter Goodwin Woodson's book, "Free Negro Heads of Families".

He shows that as far back as 1830 one-seventh of the negroes in the country were free, some of them rich, owning large plantations and other valuable property. In 1857 one negro in South Carolina owned 200 slaves, and numerous negroes owned respectively 91, 89, 50 and 47 slaves. Many others owned smaller numbers. It being estimated that 40,000 free negroes owned nearly 100,000 slaves at one time.

The story is told of a Charleston negro who admired a female slave and who by a neighbor and bought her for a wife. Later on when she failed to behave herself as he thought proper, he sold her at a profit of $50.

THE LETTER OF THE LAW

Some laws are difficult of interpretation because of the obscurity of their language, while others are so plain that he who runs, even though he be a fool, may read and understand.

The driver of a motor vehicle in Connecticut ran afoul of one of the latter kind. The law requires every person operating a motor vehicle in that state to have a windshield wiper on his machine. That is plain enough.

The luckless driver in question had no windshield wiper and was fined enough to admit it when arraigned in court. He explained, however, that his motor vehicle was a truck, which was not equipped with even a windshield, much less a wiper.

But the magistrate, adhering to the plain letter of the law, fined him regardless. Doubtless the same fate awaits any unfortunate owner of a motorcycle or tractor who gets hailed before that simple-minded magistrate.

PAUL WRITES A MESSAGE

THE work was going well everywhere, even in Thessalonica! And they hoped Paul would come back! Eagerly Paul called for parchment, and, with Timothy as a volunteer stenographer, he dictated a letter to send back to Thessalonica.

He told them how he had left with his two companions, but on reaching Athens had changed his mind and sent Silas and Timothy back:

Wherefore when we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone;

And sent Timotheus, our brother, and minister of God, and our fellow-labourer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you.

It almost killed him to think that they might have forsaken their faith. But they had not; they were standing fast.

But when Timotheus came from you unto us, and brought us good tidings of your faith and charity, and that ye have good remembrance of us always, desiring greatly to see us, as we also to you:

Therefore, brethren, we are comforted over you in all our affliction and distress by your faith:

For now we live, if ye stand fast in the Lord.

FARMER JONES AND HIS COW PEN

By JUDGE W. M. BRUNSON

It is very gratifying to me to receive letters and cards from citizens throughout this section of the state explaining their success in the old age pensions. It is very pathetic to read the hard luck stories of these aged people. Most of them have worked out their days of usefulness in an honest effort to support themselves, their families and the government. They fought a good fight, but owing to the depression and the failure of our banking institutions they have been reduced to poverty with no hope of ever regaining their lost possessions. Now these older people are all in favor of old age penalons. Most of them are not greedy or unreasonable in their contentions but simply want enough to exist on without being upon charity. There are thousands of citizens who are now drawing pensions from the government by reason of their former employment with the government and the writer has no objection to these people having their pension. However, I can not see the justice of giving one man a good government job for 20 or 30 years and then retiring him on pay while his brother, who is just as good a citizen, and who has not had a good government job a single day, is left out in the cold with no provisions for his care or subsistance in his old days. It may be that such a plan is right, it may be that such a plan is fair, and it may be that such a plan will continue to prevail in this country, but the writer is absolutely unable to find the first trace of fairness in such a law or system and from this day on I expect to fight for such an old age pension that will at least guarantee to each old person in this country enough to live on without suffering or having to beg. I hope that each reader of this article will discuss this matter with his neighbors and friends until every citizen in his community will be just as enthusiastic about the matter as is the writer. I am receiving some very nice letters and cards from people on this subject and I want you to know that I appreciate them. I hope that every person in this section who is interested in the matter will take time to drop me a line and let me know that you are interested.

Our spring garden should be planted immediately after Christmas and it is now time for a good farmer to break up and fertilize his garden. I suggest that you have your garden sub-soiled this week. Then after it rains you should break it again but the last time should be with a turning plow and should be broken so as to lay off the rows. It is never advisable to break a garden and plant it at the same time. Your land should be prepared at least ten days before planting. I suggest that you plow up your garden and put out the fertilizer before Christmas and then plant on the first warm day after Christmas.

In planting your early garden be sure you do not plant the seed down in a deep furrow as heavy rains will pack the dirt around the seeds and tend to choke the plants. Your young plants need the warmth from the ground but if it happens to be rainy your garden will not do well if the young plants are down in a deep water furrow. It is not best to have your plants on top of a high bed as the cold wind will kill them or stunt them, so that they will not do well. I suggest that you run the rows east and west across the garden, that you put plenty of fertilizer in the water furrow and that you throw one furrow on the fertilizer and be sure to turn the dirt toward the north. It will be necessary for you to drag your plow back from the west end of the garden to the east end as you must plow each furrow beginning at the east end. As you have been told by many of the agricultural agents, the Woodland Grove public road, sometimes called the public road from Elba, to Alabama, to Brundidge, Alabama. Also a tract of five acres, more or less, being situated partly in the Southeast quarter of the Northwest quarter and partly in the Southwest quarter of Northwest quarter of Section Thirty-one, lying South of public road and more particularly described as follows: Beginning at a point on the South side of the public road where the forty line between the above described forties crosses the public road, running thence West along the south margin of public road one hundred thirty yards to an old field road, thence South along the East side of old field road one hundred sixty yards, thence East one hundred sixty yards, thence North one hundred sixty yards, to public road, thence West along the North margin of public road thirty yards to point of beginning. All the above described land being in Township Six, Range Twenty-one, and containing two hundred eighty-five acres, more or less and being known as the "Home Place" of the said W. T. Plant and each and every part of said place is hereby conveyed whether specifically described or not.

Notice is hereby given that under the terms of sale contained in said mortgage to foreclose same, said property will be sold at public auction for cash to the highest bidder, during the legal hours of sale, at the Court House Door in the Town of Elba, Coffee County, Alabama, on the 14th day of January, A. spots you should haul leaves or litter of some kind and broadcast over these places. If there is an excess of stalks and grass it will be best to go over it with a stalk cutter and then plow in. Please keep in mind that all the vegetable matter will have sufficient time to decay before planting time. You will also please remember, that your land is to be broken broadcast, with a two-horse plow, in December, broken the same way in February and a third time in April or May, according to the seasons. I am going to advise each farmer who follows my plan to shut two or three acres in Spanish peanuts, so get your land ready and also be watching for further information at a later time.

There in Alabama we can carry two crops on a year, and sometimes three, and we can work out of doors nearly every day in the twelve months. We can grow nearly every kind of a field crop as well as vegetables and fruits. Let's quit being down-hearted and go to work and make our state come back quickly.

The cash income of Alabama farmers this year is approximately $131,000,000 compared with $58,509,000 in 1932, and $73,786,000 in 1933. This shows that the cash income this year more than doubled that of 1932.

TENTH INSTALLMENT

She raised her hand, holding the glass, toward her lips, but when the hand reached her lips there wasn't any glass in it. For Dick very firmly, indeed, had taken it from her fingers.

"You'll not drink to that toast, Ellen," he said, and he wasn't, now, the same man who had kissed her a moment before. "In fact, you're not drink to any toast. In fact, you'll not drink at all!"

Tony set down his glass so carefully, upon a table, that it might have been a breath. He crossed across the room rather slowly, and as he came the crowd fell away from him. The six men who made the music put his accordion behind him. It was a good accordion, he never risked it.

Tony came across the floor—he came as slowly that it seemed as if he must be tired, and he didn't speak also close to us—close to Dick that their coats were almost touching.

"After all," he said, and his chin had an ugly line to it, "taking it by and large, Ellen is married to me, not to you. Whether she drinks, or not, is no business of yours. It concerns us, Ellen and me."

Dick had set Ellen's glass upon a nearby table. It bubbled, all by itself, and where it had been spilled it was golden.

"I should say so, too, old man," he said. "All of the worthwhile things in the world concern only you reasonably and decently and in good God, boy—I'm older than you are, and I'm very fond of Ellen, and when I see you making fools of yourselves . . ."

"You wouldn't consider it fitting?" Tony drawled, and asked, "this business of kissing a married woman when her husband was right here?" When he'd scarcely had the time "—" the boy's voice shook, suddenly, "to think of anything to say.

"I'd say it was darned foolish," Dick answered. "I'd say it was a completely dreadful thing to do. I'm ashamed of myself, Brander, and I apologize to you and to Ellen. It's only that I'm so fond of Ellen—"

The girl in the white satin frock, who leaned so nonchalantly against the bar, was interrupting.

"Besides," she drawled, "kissing doesn't mean quite as much to you folk who are Bohemians. Love isn't such a staple thing with you. With us—people living and being married—it's more important. We don't take such a matter of course. . . ."

Ellen's eyes were filling. It was Jane she called "you folk" and "us." Ellen's eyes' which were almost violet, did droop with fatigue, opened very wide.

"Why, you know my address," she said. "Take me there!"

Tony's voice was cold and hard. "I'm afraid you're too innocent to realize," he said, "that people usually go to hotels on their wedding night. This is supposed, you know, to be our honeymoon."

"But," Ellen's voice was neither cold nor hard, "but—how can it be, Tony? We—all evening it's been so strange—all day! We can't be married just because I'm wearing a ring. I can't be your wife just because—"

"I thought," said Tony, "that my ring was supposed to be enough, as long as my wedding vows went with it—that seems to be the consensus of opinion, too. And this evening—beginning at the moment I found you in Alven's arms, ending when he kissed you and hung his feeling that you're a little tired—seems to prove that you were being as honest about your emotions as you said you were!"

Ellen's jaw was clamping down hard.

"As far as Dick goes," she said, "I don't think he acted very much less like a brother than your Jane acted like a sister . . . I've got to see that you've got any special leave to talk as you do!"

Tony's jaw, too, was set.

"I guess," he said, "that we'd better go to your room, at that. We've got to talk this thing out, you and I."

They reached her room. It was such a cool, sweet little room that the tears rushed to Ellen's eyes as she switched on the light. She'd bought everything in that room, herself—she'd made the curtains and the daybed cover; she'd painted the furniture. It was such a prim little room—it was virginal, almost. A man like Tony could never understand how much it stood for.

Tony sank down into a deep chair. He sighed again. This time, however, it was an appreciative sigh.

"It's nice," he said ."when you get her!"

Ellen was removing her hat, and the jacket that she wore. She ran her fingers through her hair.

"Do you know," he said at last, reclining his legs out in front of him, "there's been a lot of excitement and drinking and smoking, but we haven't had anything to eat since luncheon. Maybe we're hungry. Maybe that's what's wrong with us."

Life was like that. It caught you up to the heights of hysteria. It lowered you gently into the calm of homely things.

"I could make us fried egg sandwiches," said Ellen. "Behind that screen there is a kitchenette sort of arrangement. I often cook my own supper, and always my own breakfast. There's milk, too!"

Tony wiggled his toes, in their shiny brown shoes.

"That sounds swell," he said.

So Ellen retired behind the screen, and it wasn't long before the pleasant sputter of frying—and the even more pleasant odor of melting butter and toasting bread, began to drift from around the screen. Tony sniffed appreciatively.

"We're keeping house already," he called to Ellen. "It was as if there had never been any melodramatic, ugly scenes."

Ellen called back:

"I like this a lot better than the Sans Souci!"

And Tony answered:

"I'll say I do, too!"

They ate the sandwiches eagerly, and drank their milk, from gayly painted five and ten cent store cups. Ellen had no plates, too, and cookies, and preserved peaches. It was like a party—a juvenile sort of a party. Ellen, as she bit into her sandwich, knew that she had never enjoyed anything so much as this. Tony was the matter with them: maybe they had been hungry. Many a time she had declared over a fried egg sandwich: Mary's home has been reunited across the years of shadows and a dish of little cakes!

But even so, there were things to be said—this pleasant interlude couldn't go on forever. As Tony, at last, rose coolly, slowly, Ellen wished that the argument might start, so that it would the sooner be over.

Ellen precipitated the crisis. She was always precipitating things she didn't intend to say.

"Can Jane cook?" she asked. Tony shrugged.

"I wish," she said, "that we might have liked each other, Jane and I. But I'm afraid it isn't possible. . . ."

"That," said Tony, "is the way I feel about Alven. He's a nice guy, and I don't doubt a good deal of Jane's, but I'm afraid he's not. So far as I'm concerned."

Ellen's chin rose and carried her tray away to the kitchenette place. "Dick is so regular, Tony. You must understand that. He's asked me to marry him, yes. But never—never—has he ever kissed me before this day—you've got to believe that! And he'll never kiss me again, I'm sure—unless I tell him to. You can count on Dick, Tony. Dick is a gentleman."

"And Jane," said Tony shortly, "is a gentlewoman. You can count on her!"

Ellen could have killed herself for saying it, but she couldn't help herself.

"Jane didn't make it very easy for me tonight," she said. "I don't think she acted like a gentlewoman, exactly. She gave me a rotten time."

Tony was flushing, but, oddly enough, he held his peace.

"I don't think she behaved very well, either," he said. "And I don't know whether or not she was in love with me. Our families were neighbors—summer places were adjoining. I'm fond of Jane, too. She's a swell girl and plays a swell game of golf, and tennis, and she can dance."

"I can dance, too," said Ellen. She offered it babyishly, as an apology because she couldn't ride or play golf or play tennis . . ."

Tony agreed.

"I'll say you can dance," he agreed. All at once he was coming across the little prim room—and then he was on the arm of Ellen's chair, and his arm was around her.

"I'll never forget our first dance together," he said. "Will you—my darling?"

But even as their lips met, Ellen found herself wondering whether her father had said that long ago to her mother. She fought against the way in which she was returning Tony's kisses—she fought to keep the thoughts of her father, of her mother, uppermost.

"I'm not let you get me," she said, a trifle breathlessly, more than a trifle wildly.

Tony's arm grew tighter; he hadn't quite caught the words.

"But I have got you!" he said.

"You'll never get me," she said. "Not really! Remember that, Tony. There can be fifty girls like Jane, and they can all love you, and it won't matter to me! Remember that, Tony. Fifty girls—like Jane!"

They reached her room. It was such a cool, sweet little room that

The streets were quiet. It was later than they, either of them, had thought. Tony drove carefully, until he reached the broad gritty tearing avenue that bisected the city.

"Where to?" he questioned, then.

Ellen's eyes' which were almost violet did droop with fatigue, opened very wide.

"Why, you know my address," she said. "Take me there!"

Tony's voice was cold and hard. "I'm afraid you're too innocent to realize," he said, "that people usually go to hotels on their wedding night. This is supposed, you know, to be our honeymoon."

"But," Ellen's voice was neither cold nor hard, "but—how can it be, Tony? We—all evening it's been so strange—all day! We can't be married just because I'm wearing a ring. I can't be your wife just because—"

"I thought," said Tony, "that my ring was supposed to be enough, as long as my wedding vows went with it—that seems to be the consensus of opinion, too. And this evening—beginning at the moment I found you in Alven's arms, ending when he kissed you and hung his feeling that you're a little tired—seems to prove that you were being as honest about your emotions as you said you were!"

Ellen's jaw was clamping down hard.

"As far as Dick goes," she said, "I don't think he acted very much less like a brother than your Jane acted like a sister . . . I've got to see that you've got any special leave to talk as you do!"

Tony's jaw, too, was set.

"I guess," he said, "that we'd better go to your room, at that. We've got to talk this thing out, you and I."

They reached her room. It was such a cool, sweet little room that the tears rushed to Ellen's eyes as she switched on the light. She'd bought everything in that room, herself—she'd made the curtains and the daybed cover; she'd painted the furniture. It was such a prim little room—it was virginal, almost. A man like Tony could never understand how much it stood for.

Tony sank down into a deep chair. He sighed again. This time, however, it was an appreciative sigh.

"It's nice," he said ."when you get her!"

Ellen was removing her hat, and the jacket that she wore. She ran her fingers through her hair.

"Do you know," he said at last, reclining his legs out in front of him, "there's been a lot of excitement and drinking and smoking, but we haven't had anything to eat since luncheon. Maybe we're hungry. Maybe that's what's wrong with us."

Life was like that. It caught you up to the heights of hysteria. It lowered you gently into the calm of homely things.

"I could make us fried egg sandwiches," said Ellen. "Behind that screen there is a kitchenette sort of arrangement. I often cook my own supper, and always my own breakfast. There's milk, too!"

Tony wiggled his toes, in their shiny brown shoes.

"That sounds swell," he said.

So Ellen retired behind the screen, and it wasn't long before the pleasant sputter of frying—and the even more pleasant odor

hibited by all four teams. If athletes could only realize how pleasing it is to spectators to witness good, clean sport, nearly much of the rough stuff that is so common, especially in basketball and football games, would be eliminated. It is freely predicted that Coach H. H. Larkins has his Kinston quintet headed for a State championship.

STATE RECORD—State Highway Engineer C. H. Inman informs us that a state record was established when the fill across the Winston swamp was being built. Twenty thousand feet of dirt was moved in twelve working days, which Mr. Inman says is a state record for one shovel. Mr. Inman who is supervising the work being done on Elba's paving projects, states that he has never seen dirt moved so rapidly and put into a fill so proficiently as was done on the Winston fill. Although the fill is almost twenty feet high, after being open to traffic for several weeks, it is said that the surface has not settled an inch. The dirt was spread in 8-inch layers and thoroughly leveled and packed with a heavy steam roller. It is predicted that this fill will stand for many generations.

DENTISTS ON DUTY—Dr. W. M. Ringsdorf, one of the most efficient and progressive dentists in Alabama, attended a meeting of the Southeastern Division of Alabama Dental Association in Dothan Monday and Tuesday. The newly organized body and the thirty or more dentists present showed much enthusiasm for the organization. It is a component part of the State Dental Association.

FINE PRESENT—It is reported that Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Dorsey intend to give a Ford coupe to Mr. Dorsey, students at the University of Alabama, up to California as a Christmas present, to witness the famous Rose Bowl football game between the Alabama Crimson and Stanford Indians. Some Christmas gift!

WELL GUARDED—It is reported that one railroad is contemplating running a train of box cars from Tuscaloosa to California for the Rose Bowl football game. If it is planned to put 35 bunks in each car and charge each student $9 for the round trip, it will get around the law forbidding freight trains carrying passengers except to care for livestock, as each student will be a dog in each car. The dog should be well chaperoned.

OLDEST EDITOR—Gen. J. B. Stanley, who died at his home in Greenville last Sunday, bore the unique distinction of being the oldest editor in point of service in the United States. He was actively engaged in the newspaper business for nearly 70 years. He was a member of the confederate ranks of Confederate veterans, a staunch and most exemplary citizen that has to do with the upbuilding and history of Alabama. He established the Greenville Advocate in 1865 and has been actively identified with that newspaper all down through the years, which is known as one of the leading weeklies of this section of the State. A more comprehensive account of the life and death of General Stanley appears in another column of this issue of The Clipper.

SELF-HELP CLOTHES FOR CHILDREN

An exhibit of children's clothing, designed for easy making and easy laundering, and to help the child to dress himself, will be shown at the New Brockton Home Economics Department Thursday, December 20, from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m. The designs have been furnished by the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and the exhibit will be under the direction of the Vocational Home Economics teacher, Mrs. B. A. Johnson.

Freedom and comfort for the active child, encouragement to self-help, and the saving of his mother's time and energy are the main objectives in the Bureau of Home Economics' designs. All of the garments in the exhibit are adjustable, also, to the growing child, extra material being allowed for lengthening. There is a minimum of buttons, and those that are used are conveniently placed, and of a size and type easy for children to manage.

Most of the fabrics are cotton, but there are also some washable woolens. The materials in all the garments were chosen because of their all-round practicability for children's clothes. Cottons can be secured in many weaves and qualities, for any sort of suit or dress, in the exhibit demonstration.

The garments included in the exhibit are play suits, sun suits, and sun suit ensembles for girls and boys, dresses for little girls, infant's wear, and rompers for the creeping babies. They were designed by the staff of the Division of Textiles and Clothing in the Bureau of Home Economics at Washington, and four such exhibits are constantly in circulation throughout the country in response to requests from extension workers or institutions or organizations concerned with child welfare. The exhibit does not distribute patterns for the garments, but several pattern manufacturers have adopted the bureau's designs and put the patterns on the market. The names of these firms, together with the pattern numbers, will be furnished by the bureau upon request.

JOIN NAVY—John Will Reddoch and Tom Kendrick went to Birmingham Sunday afternoon and stood final examination Monday morning preparatory to entering the U. S. Navy. Both passed the examination and left that afternoon for Norfolk, Va., where they will be stationed at the Navy's training base. Tom will instruct him to appear in Birmingham a week later, but as John Will was going Saturday, he thought he would accompany him and take a chance of some applicant failing to show up. Sure enough, there was a vacancy and John stepped right into it. Both boys went on their way rejoicing. The whole community congratulates John Will and Tom in their good fortune.

LOST FINE DOG—N. G. Tillman is bemoaning the loss of his fine bird dog. W. T. Whitman has been keeping "Pat" and somebody either took him out of the pen to go hunting or he got out. Anyway, Walter missed "Pat" when he went home at noon last Friday, but thought nothing about it, as Mr. Tillman frequently went to the pen and took the dog out. But the next Mr. Whitman heard of saw of the dog, he was dead, evidently poisoned. Mr. Whitman is considerably worried over being without a hunting dog. However, he has a highly bred puppy, a gift from Judge Parks, coming on, from which he expects great things.

DECEPTIVE—A crew of expert glass workers is overhauling the memorial windows in the Baptist and Methodist Churches this week. To passersby or casual observers the windows appear to be in good condition, but when committees examined them they were found to be in a very weak and dangerous condition. A heavy wind or a violent storm would have been likely to send the expensive glass crashing, so it is believed that the repair work is a good investment. The deceptive condition of the church windows is a fair illustration of life. We cannot always judge by appearances alone. Many things that appear to be sound on the outside may be wholly rotten in the interior.

ELBA SENIORS ENTERTAIN BRANCH HIGH SCHOOLS—

After the show the remainder of the evening was spent at the home of Robert Marsh. A series of games added to the gaiety of the occasion. This was followed by a delightful salad course and coffee.

Those present included members of Brantley High School Senior class, Elba High School Senior class, Prof. and Mrs. Paul C. Morgan of Brantley, Prof. and Mrs. J. C. Dixon, Mrs. Roberta Childs, Mrs. Wesley Ham and Prof. J. W. Mayfield.

SYRUP AND POTATOES WILL BE PURCHASED

The federal surplus relief corporation has authorized the Alabama relief administration to purchase 2,000 gallons of sugar cane syrup and 50,000 bushels of sweet potatoes.

The syrup will be bought at a maximum of 50 cents a gallon, packed in gallon tins, and the potatoes at a maximum price of 55 cents per bushel. The syrup and potatoes will be bought first from farmers under the rural rehabilitation program and then from others if the supply from this source is not sufficient, reports the relief administration.

It's hard to make the average man see that a large part of an insurance premium is a pure investment backed by comparatively little interest and that in paying on it he isn't really "spending" but really saving, as he gets not only dividends but protection.

Alabama Approves Act By Margin Of 19 To 1

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 15.—Virtually complete returns from yesterday's vote on continuation of the Bankhead cotton control act in Alabama today showed a majority of slightly more than 200,000 for the measure.

A tabulation tonight showed 211,955 votes cast for and 11,450 for retention of the measure for 1935, with only 11,242 against.

Walter Jones, executive aid of Senator John H. Bankhead and Representative William B. Bankhead, co-authors of the legislation, was closest of Alabama 67 counties on the measure. The vote there was 2,135-60 for continuance and 1,357-59 for retention. In other sections, the vote ran from 100 to one and the ratio for the State was more than ten to one.

The final figures revealed that Alabama's cotton growers voted in unprecedented unanimity in virtually every county of the State. It had been estimated that 225,000 were eligible to cast ballots in the election, and the final figures are expected to approximate that figure.

Farm leaders had estimated that the State's vote at not more than 175,000.

Southern States Okeh Act By More Than 10 To 1

The vote of cotton farmers on retention of compulsory cotton production control for another year, as compiled from official sources by The Associated Press, Saturday night stood as follows:

State—	Number Favoring	Number Against
Alabama	173,249	7,557
Arkansas	99,785	3,538
Arizona	1,161	459
California	1,081	585
Florida	3,992	304
Georgia	121,329	18,630
Kentucky	1,545	400
Louisiana	96,173	2,566
Mississippi	164,824	5,143
Missouri	7,019	1,239
New Mexico	1,840	650
N. Carolina	117,232	9,545
Oklahoma	41,741	27,145
S. Carolina	111,933	4,248
Tennessee	51,706	4,379
Texas	88,343	13,018
Virginia	7,273	244
TOTAL	1,060,226	99,650

A two-thirds favorable majority of those voting is necessary for continuing production control for the next year.

Opposition In Georgia

The majority given the measure was far in excess of the two-thirds necessary for retention in 1935.

Heavy opposition was noted in Georgia, although that state's cotton planters favored the bill by a majority of more than six to one. Gov. Eugene Talmadge, one of the Roosevelt Administration's most persistent critics, had advised Georgia farmers to vote against the bill.

Talmadges home county, Telfair, voted more than 12 to one to continue the act. Meriwether County, where, at Warm Springs, during his recent vacation Mr. Roosevelt urged continuance of the measure, rolled up a majority of about 13 to one to retain the Bankhead bill.

Five Northern Georgia counties, where the state's Republican strength is concentrated, returned votes against the measure. They were: Whitfield, Pickens, Dawson, Gilmer and Forsyth.

Several other counties reported no votes against the measure.

Elsewhere in the Old South there was little opposition. Of the first 400 ballots counted in Arkansas, 399 were cast for continuance. The voting in the Carolinas was at a ratio of nearly 100 to one for the plan. Of the first 4,000 from Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee and even Virginia, where little cotton is grown, were strong for the act.

Approximately 2,600,000 farmers in the deep Southern states and in Texas, Oklahoma and other cotton producing states were eligible to vote in the referendum, which was conducted under auspices of the county control committees which helped administer the act.

FERTILIZER PRICE FACTS ARE GIVEN

Retail prices of mixed fertilizers in the spring of 1935 will probably be slightly lower than in the spring of 1934, says the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Prices of potash and tankage will be lower, the mineral ammoniates about the same or somewhat lower, prices on cottonseed meal and superphosphate will be higher than a year earlier," says the report.

MEMBERS OF C. OF C. TO AID IN DISTRIBUTIN' XMAS BOXES

The Chamber of Commerce held its regular meeting, one of the most enthusiastic and enthusiastic of the year, on Tuesday evening. The meeting was held at the Green Lantern Cafe and a fried chicken dinner was enjoyed.

In the absence of President W. M. Brunson, who is confined to his home on account of illness, Vice-President Jack Dixon presided. Reports from several members in regard to the paving project on the Troy highway were heard, and it was learned that some difficulty has been encountered in securing the right-of-way deeds and this has resulted in the temporary postponement of awarding the contract. Bids were received on this project last Friday, and it was announced that Hardaway Contracting Company was low bidder. Several members of the body have agreed to act as a committee to assist officials in ironing out differences and securing deeds in order that this work might get under way at the earliest date possible.

Members of the organization unanimously adopted a motion to join the American Legion and Legion Auxiliary in the distribution of Christmas boxes to the needy in the city. Names from the two other organizations have already been named and the members of the Chamber of Commerce were named to cooperate with them. Each member will be asked to do work along this line and contributions will be asked for from every one who feels able to contribute. Many of the less fortunate in the city will not enjoy this Christmas season unless liberal contributions are made. More than $50 in cash was paid in by members at the meeting Tuesday evening and many, others are yet to be seen.

The committee announces that it can use any article of clothing, bedding, etc., as well as food. Contributions of this character may be left at Elba Hardware & Furniture Company or with Bonneau-Jeter Hdw. Co.

The amount of the amount of time consumed in other matters, the election of officers for the new year was postponed until the first meeting in 1935, which will be held on Tuesday evening, January 8.

BURNS ADVISES FARMERS TO FEED ROUGHAGE LIBERALLY

From one end of Alabama to the other, F. W. Burns, extension livestock specialist of Auburn, is telling farmers that the high price of grains is making it advisable to feed roughage liberally this winter in order to reduce the amount of grain needed in livestock diet.

Good home-grown roughage will supply the nutrients at a smaller cost than purchased grain, he says, and will also maintain a good milk flow as well as keep the animals in good condition.

FARM TAX SITUATION SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

AUBURN, Ala.—The farm tax situation has recently shown some improvement, says the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, which reports that "farm real estate taxes per acre levied in 1933 were about 14 per cent less than those levied in 1932."

The department estimates "a further decrease in taxes of 5 to 10 per cent in the 1934 levies, with the benefits to farmers from this decrease partially offset by substitute taxes."

About People and Things

By C. B. McDowell

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE—The Elba Chamber of Commerce held its regular bi-monthly banquet at the Green Lantern Cafe Tuesday evening with about thirty members present. In the words of Y. W. Rainer, "I want all those who think this is one of the very best suppers the club has ever had to raise their right hands." Every one present shot up said hands. Host John Jackson, blushing like an old-fashioned country boy when he called on his maiden fair, was so elated that he lost no time in accepting the invitation to become the baby member of the club. In the absence of Chairman W. M. Brunson, who hadn't sufficiently recovered from the Lily Valley "possum dinner to be able to be present, Vice-Chairman Charles Howe presided. Considerable important business was transacted. On account of Chairman Brunson's absence, the report from the committee appointed to look after the Dunley's Cross Roads project was deferred until next meeting. Attorney J. C. Fleming reported that good progress had been made in obtaining deeds to right-of-way for the additional three and a fraction miles on the Elba-Troy highway paving project. He said, however, that several property owners along the route had not yet signed and at his suggestion, volunteers were called for to contact said property owners and persuade them to sign the deeds at the earliest possible moment. Several volunteered to assist. J. F. Brunson announced that he had fifty family record books that he proposed to present to members of the club as compliments of the Elba Merchants Exchange.

CHRISTMAS BASKETS—Probably the most important matter of business transacted at the Chamber of Commerce supper Tuesday evening was making plans for distributing Christmas baskets, clothing and other articles for the needy of the community. Forest Talbot and James English announced that the American Legion Post had appointed a committee to function in conjunction with other organizations in the Christmas distribution to the needy. Mr. Talbot, being chairman. After an eloquent appeal by Rev. B. Guy Smith, Prof. Jas. C. Dixon, J. C. Robbins and J. C. Fleming were appointed as a committee to work with the American Legion committee. D. J. Brooks started the donation ball to rolling and
